EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

THERE has been a big Democratic funeral lately.

HAS any one heard anything lately of a man by the name of Daniel O'Connell Barr?

THE Democracy have journeyed further up Salt River than they ever went before, and probably will not get back again this century.

THE Democracy, in order to be well prepared for the campaign of 1880, have determined to reduce the tax on distilled spirits at the next meeting of Congress.

DURING a street row in Philadelphia last Tuesday week, Samuel Reeves drew a knife and cut right and left. Thomas Weldom was killed and many others wounded. Rum was the cause of the trouble as usual.

MR. GEORGE MELLON, of Pittsburgh, woke up one night a short time ago and found his wife gone. Upon making search for her, she was found standing in a closet with a razor in her hand, and her throat cut from ear to ear.

WASN'T that a grand Republican dress parade we had last week? The Demmies looked on in wonder. We will show them another next fall, only perhaps, more grand. They will enjoy it as an eel enjoys being skinned.

THE Elk county Gazette, Democratic, urges Democrats "to cheer up," assuring them that the darkest hour is just before the dawn. Don't discourage yourselves, my fine lads, we won't sit down on you again until 1880.

RUSSIA wants three thousand tons of American lead, and when she puts that lead to use in bullets for killing, she will also want thousands of bushels of wheat to feed those men and make up for the loss of their labor among the producing classes of Europe.

THE Cameron county Press says: "There were two splendid rainbows in Clearfield county this month, but no mention is made by our exchanges there of any coffee color in their tints. It being about election time, such colors are to be expected in that region."

SOME Democratic journals are throwing out hints that as they will have the Congress, they can count in whom they please for President in 1880. They tried that game in 1876, when they also had a Democratic Congress, but they did not make it. Will they be more successful again?

GEN. GRANT has at last arrived at his home in Galena, Ill. After his extended trip around the world, his old friends and neighbors were wild with joy at his return and gave him a hearty welcome. Bon-fires were built, bells were rang and all were eager to pay their respects to the General and his lady.

PATRICK MOORE, a laborer at the Pennsylvania railroad shops, at Altoona, was killed last Thursday. He was attempting to shift a belt from one wheel to another, when he became entangled in the machinery and was whirled round several times, striking his head each time. He lived but a few moments after the accident.

THE work of whisky—last Wednesday a man by the name of Patsy McCormick was put out of a saloon in New York. He resisted and in the course of the struggle, plunged a knife into the bowels of the man who was endeavoring to eject him. John Corney went to the assistance of the wounded man when he was treated in exactly the same manner. Both men will die.

The Late Elections.

When the election news of last week were published, every true Republican felt happy, and almost all with one accord said "Good enough." But good as they were, later returns are better yet, and run Republican majorities up to figures beyond the hopes of the most sanguine. Last week we reported Pennsylvania as having given upwards of forty-five thousand plurality; this week we can state definitely that the Republican plurality reaches the marvelous proportions of nearly sixty thousand, being 58,675. The Greenback vote will not be over 15,000, while the Prohibition vote is very light. The Republican majority over all will be 42,000. This is the greatest Republican victory since Grant ran against Greeley.

Last year, on the vote for Governor, the Republicans had a plurality of 22,353; the Greenback vote was 81,758, and the Prohibitionists cast 3,759 votes. If the Democracy of the Keystone State do not feel completely snowed in, we will try next fall to bury them deeper than ever.

NEW YORK.

Last week our information in regard to New York was such that we placed Cornell's (Rep.) majority at from 20,000 to 25,000; but we have done better than that, and Cornell has carried the State by a plurality of 43,633. The vote on the balance of the ticket is close, but there is no doubt of the election of all the Republicans, except Souel, candidate for State Engineer. The Tribune says that the returns indicate the election of Hoskins (Rep.) for Lieutenant-Governor by a plurality of 1,400. The pluralities for Ward, Carr, Wadsworth and Wendell range from 4,500 to 9,500. By this it will be seen that the Republicans have gained incalculable advantage. In this State, which is to be the key to the great battle of 1880, with Cornell for Governor, and a Legislature in hearty sympathy with him, no successful attempt can be made to bulldoze New York City into the support of an unwelcome Presidential candidate. A thorough expulsion of corrupt officials in the cities now under Democratic rule will make a great difference in the political situation just before the Presidential election. All these advantages the scratchers, led by Curtis, would have taken from the Republican party. We here repeat that the time, and only time, to fight obnoxious candidates in the party is before they are nominated, not after; for often after their nomination great party interests hang upon their election. In New York the success of these theroists would have kept in power, to do mischief, a most unscrupulous set of Democrats, at the risk, also, of surrendering the National Government to disloyalists and repudiators, just to satisfy a grudge, and prove that they were really persons of some consequence. Surely, for any patriot or party man to take such ground, is running a great risk to serve most unworthy motives. We hope the Republican bolters of Centre county will think of this, and apply it to themselves.

Holding, as we now do, the power in all the doubtful States, the Republican party is ready to open the contest of 1880, with almost certain prospects of success. It will be our own fault if we allow ourselves to be beaten by fraud in any Northern State. Of course, we expect it in the barbarous States of the South, and must make our calculations accordingly. We hold the position on all the great questions of the day, in which we have been entirely sustained by the people. We shall, therefore, elect the next President, and shape the history of the country for the next quarter of a century.

CONNECTICUT.

The news from this State is as good as everywhere else. We have carried the Legislature by an increased majority, which gives the Republicans a U. S. Senator, in place of Eaton, Democrat. Last year the Republicans had a majority of 7 in the Senate, and 40 in the House, giving them a majority of 47 on joint ballot. This year they have 11 in the Senate and 81 in the House, which gives, on joint ballot, a Republican majority of 92. Three cheers for the Nutmeg State!

NEW JERSEY.

The latest returns from this State give the Republicans a majority in the Legislature, on joint ballot, of 15. Last year it was only 7—a gain of 8.

In Maryland the Republicans make quite large gains, although the Democratic Governor is elected by about twenty thousand majority.

In Virginia the Republicans hold the balance of power. In the Legislature, between the two factions of the Democracy, the one in favor of repudiation and the other in favor of the State paying her honest debts, the Republicans, of course, on all questions involving honesty and the State meeting all her just obligations, will vote on the side of honesty. Let our readers remember this, that in Virginia the Republicans are solid for honesty, while upon this important issue the Democracy is divided, the great majority being in favor of dishonesty.

In Mississippi the Democracy, of course, has been successful, Yazoo county being solid. Thus while the North is solid for honesty in the administration of affairs—solid for the Republican party—the South is solid for Democracy, barbarism, repudiation and ignorance. It is fortunate for the future of the Republic that the North is solid, and that it will remain solid for some time to come. Every freeman, every patriot, will take heart again and rejoice that the danger of the dominance of the bourbon element in our political future is at an end.

GOV. HOYT has issued the following proclamation, appointing November 27 as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed throughout the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

In devout recognition of the God of States who has ordered peace, health and abundant prosperity to the people, I, Henry M. Hoyt, Governor of Pennsylvania, do appoint Thursday, the 27th day of November next, in pursuance of the recommendation of the President of the United States, as a day upon which the good people of this Commonwealth, laying aside all secular occupations, may meet together in reverent thanksgiving for the mercies received and prayer for a continuance of divine favor.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State at Harrisburg this 7th day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, and of the Commonwealth the one hundred and fourth.

HENRY M. HOYT.

By the Governor:
M. S. QUAY,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

GEN. JOSEPH HOOKER, known in the army as "Fighting Joe Hooker," died at his residence, Garden City, Long Island, Friday afternoon, Oct. 31st. Gen. Hooker was born at Hadley, Mass., in 1815, and graduated at West Point in 1837, served in the Florida and Mexican wars, resigned in 1853, re-entered the army at the breaking out of the rebellion in 1861, and was appointed Brigadier General of volunteers March 17th. That same year his record during that war is known to all. He was placed on the retired list Oct. 15, 1868. It is thought that his sudden death, like that of Senator Chandler's, was brought on by the use of tobacco.

VIRGINIA by the late election seems to have taken its place in line with the States not honest enough to pay their debts, making the solid South solid as a rock against honor and honesty. Mississippi also sends word that she is solid, though it was necessary to burn ballot-boxes to make her so.

THE presidential aspirations of Randall, Hancock and Coffee-Pot Wallace are overwhelmed and suffocated under a Republican majority of over 58,000.

One of Our Best Men Gone.

On Sunday morning, November the 1st, Hon. Zachariah Chandler, Senator from Michigan, whom everybody knows, and every Republican loved and revered for his manly and fearless defense of truth and right, was found dead in his bed at the Grand Pacific Hotel, at Chicago. The night before, he addressed a large audience in that city. He arrived there the day before, and had complained of a pain in the pit of his stomach, which he had told a friend he thought proceeded from indigestion, produced by the use of tobacco. In the earlier part of the day on his way from Wisconsin, he asked Gen. Logan if he had ever experienced any like effect from the use of tobacco. The General had not. His speech the night before he died was one of the greatest efforts of his life, and inspired his hearers with great enthusiasm. He had thought to have this the last speech of the campaign, but some friends in Detroit had pursuaded him to make one other in that city, to which he was to have started at eight o'clock on the morning he died. The last words of dying men are always treasured; so, perhaps, it will be interesting to our readers to know what were the last utterances of the Michigan Senator to a living person—what may have been said as all alone he struggled with death will never be known. He arrived in the city about eleven o'clock in the forenoon and at once proceeded to the hotel, accompanied by his old and interesting friend, Jesse Spaulding, who accompanied him to the hall where he was to speak, and after the meeting returned to the hotel again with him, staying until half-past eleven, when he left him, wishing him a pleasant journey to Detroit. As his friend bade him good-bye, Mr. Chandler returned the pressure of his hand and said, "Well, Mr. Spaulding, I'm glad it's over, too. After I deliver my speech in Detroit, Monday night, I shall be through. We have had a a pleasant trip together, and met many prominent gentlemen, and I hope before long we shall see each other again. Good-bye!" These were his last words spoken to any person on earth, and then he was left sitting alone there in his easy chair looking into the fire. When he retired is not known. When next seen it was morning, and he lay upon his back on the bed, several pillows propped up behind his head, his coat wrapped around his shoulders as if having felt cold. He had arisen and put it there, then laid down again, his hands resting on his pillow, one on each side of his head as though he had been holding the coat about his neck; his feet hanging off the bed, giving him an appearance as though about to arise. A look of calm peacefulness rested upon his cold, dead face. A doctor was summoned as a matter of form, and the remains taken in charge by the coroner. Friends all over the country were telegraphed to, and preparations made for a funeral. At the hotel, Sunday morning after the funeral, the remains were escorted to the depot and taken by a special train to his home in Detroit, where sad hearts were awaiting to receive them.

A DISGRACEFUL scene occurred in the streets of Rochester, New York, last Wednesday. A funeral was on the street but it seems the relatives had a difference of opinion as to where the body should be buried. Graves had been dug in two separate cemeteries. The corps was forcibly taken from one coffin and transferred to another. The burial then went on without further trouble, but it is thought the grave will have to be guarded.

YAZOO county, the home of murderers, where men are shot for their political opinions, is Democratic; and that is the reason why the North is solidified against the buck-shot policy.

SENATOR BAYARD, in an interview published in yesterday's Record, makes an astonishing discovery. He says: "The Republican party should be disqualified because of its sectionalism. A man who hates one part of the country is not fit to be President over all of it. And yet this qualification is the essential one for the Republican candidate." The principles of the Republican party are broad as American citizenship and nationality. It hates nothing but injustice. It assails a "solid South" because that is the embodiment and issue of the greatest outrages ever perpetrated in communities claiming to be civilized. The record of it is written in letters of blood. Senator Bayard himself, as a member of a Congressional investigating committee some years ago, stood aghast at the recital and sickened over it. It is this conspiracy of crime which has crushed Republicanism in the South. And now he twists us for our sectionalism! Withdraw your bullies and shot-guns, Senator Bayard, from the southern States, give that people the full freedom of the ballot, and the Republicans will carry more than half of them. While you retain these barbaric relics of slavery to the dishonor of your party organization, you have no right to censure us for the direct results of the infamous policy of your party friends.—Phila. Press.

WADE HAMPTON, late rebel general, but now fraud Governor of South Carolina, urges Bayard as Democratic candidate for the Presidency next year, because he has always been a "true friend of the South." If he is a true friend of the South in the sense Hampton means he is an enemy to the republic, and the solid North will kill him (politically) as it would a venomous serpent.

THE steamship Champion, which sailed from New York last Thursday, at 5 p. m., for Charlestown, S. C., came in collision with the steamer Lady Octavia, about thirty miles from Cape Henlopen, on Friday morning, and thirty-two out of fifty-seven passengers and seamen were drowned. The whole cause of the accident seems to have been carelessness on the part of the officers of the Champion.

THE Democratic majority in Maryland is 21,543; in 1877 their majority was 30,379. Nebraska is carried by the Republicans by 15,000 majority; the Greenback vote throughout the State being trifling. The Republicans have increased their majorities in Kansas. A very light Greenback vote was polled, though in one or two places Greenback candidates were elected.

SECRETARY QUAY is reported as saying, "Tuesday's elections have ended the Grant business. Grant's chances are no better than if he were dead or never had been born." We do not see how he makes that out, but if it is so, give us Blaine, we can fight under that banner "just as hard."

IN every northern State, where legislatures have been chosen which are to elect a U. S. Senator, the Democracy have sustained a crushing defeat, which shows what the people think of the barbarous policy of the rebel Democracy.

THE public debt was reduced last month ten millions of dollars. The largest decrease since 1872, the year before the panic. This ought to encourage doubting Republicans, and give them confidence in the Administration.

THERE is considerable Democratic talk in favor of Horatio Seymour for President in 1880. If they would only make it Seymour and Blair, how we would make history repeat itself with a vengeance.

THE Republican plurality for Governor in Iowa is 72,514, and the majority over all 23,827. In 1878 the Republican plurality was 9,455, and the majority 8,155.

November Publications.

THE PENN MONTHLY, published in Philadelphia, comes to us fresh as ever. The late political economist, Henry Charles Cary, is portrayed by pen and pencil, Robert E. Thompson giving a sketch of him, and a fine steel-engraved portrait of Mr. Cary being the frontispiece. The article is an able and entertaining sketch of the dead philosopher. No more entertaining and just criticisms and remarks about the events of October have we seen than are found in the racy, clear cut paragraphs in "The Month." G. Button Massey, M. D., treats of the present management of our State Insane Hospitals, and this with "The Present position and prospects of Political Economy" and "Lafontaine and his Critics" complete the present number.

THE PRINCETON REVIEW has ceased to be a quarterly of ordinary dimensions, and has assumed more the proportions of an annual work issued in quarterly volumes. Truly 636 pages is an unusual size for a periodical.—A list of eight long and learned articles is contributed by a galaxy of noted authors, among whom appear such names as President McCosh, Dr. Mark Hopkins, President Porter, of Yale, and Lyman H. Atwater, D D. of Princeton. Two articles commend themselves, we think, particularly to the ordinary reader—"Comparative view of American Progress," by R. P. Porter, Esq., of Chicago, and "Bimetalism" by Prof. Sumner, of Yale College, both articles treating of themes of great interest to every American. The remaining pieces contain much for the scholar and thinker to digest.

CHARLES CONLEY, author of "History of Lowell," and other works, has undertaken to write a sketch of the late Dr. James C. Ayer and the town of Ayer, and the product of his labors now lay before us—a neat, well-printed pamphlet of some 150 pages, containing much that is interesting about the famous doctor, scholar and poet, as well as concerning the town of Lowell, where he built up his great industry, and the village which was named for him and amply endowed by his munificence.

BUTTER BUYERS everywhere are refusing to take white, lardy-looking butter except at "grease" prices.—Consumers want nothing but gilt-edged butter, and buyers therefore recommend their patrons to keep a uniform color throughout the year by using the Perfected Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. It is the only color that can be relied on to never injure the butter, and to always give the perfect color. Sold by druggists.

Kidney-Wort in hot weather sustains the system and keeps up the strength.

Now that majorities are figured up, the Democracy can estimate how much good their extra session of Congress did them—their effort to starve the Government. They then pompously declared they would appeal to the people. Well, they appealed, and the people have rendered their verdict, but it is not the decision the Johnnies looked for.

WHAT MAKES YOU SICK?—You have allowed your bowels to become habitually costive, your liver has become torpid, the same thing ails your kidneys, and you are just used up. Now be sensible, get a package of Kidney-Wort, take it faithfully, and soon you will forget you've got any such organs, for you will be a well man.

MR. S. S. COX remarked in the late campaign in New York that the Democracy of that state without New York City was a "headless rooster." Cox is solid; the result vindicates the clearness of his perception.

IT makes no difference whether it is Tilden or Bayard in 1880. Ciphers will kill one and the solid South will kill the other.

Poetry.

HER LOVERS.

My first, my very first, his name was Will—
A handsome fellow; fair, with curling hair,
And lovely eyes. I have his locket still,
He went to Galveston and settled there;
At least I heard so. Ah, dear me—dear me!
How terribly in love he used to be!

The second, Robert Hill, he told his love
The first time that we met 'Twas at a ball—
A foolish boy. He carried off my glove,
We sat out half the dances in the hall,
And flirted in the most outrageous way.
Ah, me! how mother scolded all next day.

The third woke up my heart. From night till morn;
From morn till night again I dreamed of him;
I treasured up a rosebud he had worn:
My tears and kisses made his picture dim.
Strange that I cannot feel the old, old flame,
When I remember Paul—that was his name.

The fourth and fifth were brothers—twins at that;
Good fellows, kind devoted, clever, too.
'Twas rather shabby to refuse them flat—
Both in one day; but what else could I do?
My heart was still with Paul, and he had gone
Yacht sailing with the Misses Garretson!

He never cared for me—I found that out—
Despite the foolish clinging of my hope;
A few months proved it clear beyond a doubt,
I steeled my heart; I would not pine or mope,
But masked myself in gayety and went
To grace his wedding when the cards were sent!

So those were all my loves. My husband? Oh!
I met him down in Florida one fall—
Rich, middle-aged and prosy, as you know;
He asked me; I accepted; that is all.
A kind, good soul; he worships me; but then—
I never count him in with other men.

WINNIE'S WELCOME.

Well, Shamus, what brought ye?
It's dead, sure, I thought ye—
What's kept ye this fortnight from calling on me?
Stop there! Don't be lyin';
It's no use denyin',
I know you've been sighin' for Kitty Magee.

She's ould and she's homely;
There's girls young and comely,
Who've loved you much longer and better than she;
But, 'deed! I'm not carin';
I'm glad I've no share in
The love of a boy who'd loved Kitty Magee.

Go 'way! I'm not cryin'!
Your charge I'm denyin',
You're wrong to attribute such weakness to me;
If tears I'm a showin',
I'd have ye be knownin',
They're shed out of pity for Kitty Magee.

For mane and conseited,
Wid pride overweighted;
Cold, heartless and brutal she'll find you to be,
When you she'll be gettin',
She'll soon be regrettin',
She ere changed her name from plain Kitty Magee.

What's that? Am I dhramin',
You've only been schamin',
Just thryin' to test the affection in me?
But you're the sly divil!
There now! Plase be civil!
Don't hug me to death, I'm not Kitty Magee.

Your kisses confuse me—
Well, I'll not refuse ye,
I know you'll be tindher and lovin' wid me;
To show my contrition
For doubts and suspicion,
I'll ax for my bridesmaid swate Kitty Magee.

Our Story Teller.

Why Mrs. Jones Didn't Move.

In a comfortable quarter of a genial street in the metropolis, at an inviting breakfast table, sat Theophilus Jones. He had long since climbed up to a good position in the store which he had entered when a boy, and therefore took this time at his matutinal meal as became a man of his social and business standing.

It was a muggy morning in March, when the milkman's horse loomed phantom-like through the befogged basement window, and the newsboy with his bundle of papers seemed part and parcel of his anatomy.

As Mr. Jones went over to the window, to help himself to the newly manipulated sheets, a voice from the kitchen called out:

"Get the Herald, Mr. Jones?"

And he did get the Herald; but as it was not his favorite morning paper, he got it as a luxury, and put it by the plate of Mrs. Jones.

"Hum!" said that lady, entering with a smoking and savory dish in her hands, and beholding Mr. Jones reading his customary conservative sheet, "I should think, Mr. Jones, as a matter of economy, one morning paper would be enough for you."

"And so it is, Maria," said Mr. Jones. "I got the other for you."

"I'm much obliged for your liberality," she replied, "but it is a matter in which you are about as much interested as myself. I wish you'd read out some of the advertisements. If we're going to move, we'd better begin to look about us."

"To move?" said Mr. Jones.

"Yes, to move. I thought that was settled last night. You say you won't sleep on the third floor, and I'm sick and tired of having our bed in the back parlor. Rosalie needs the front parlor for her company, and I certainly think, Mr. Jones, that I ought at least to have some sort of a hole to receive my friends in."

"Well, but, my dear," expostulated Mr. Jones, with his forefinger resting upon the editorial he was reading, "why is it necessary that we should be driven from the parlor because Rosy has a beaux or two there? Live and let live, is my motto. I shan't mind them a bit. You and I can chat and read and get along in our usual way. We must not be put out by the young folks."

"Yes; but do you suppose the young folks won't be put out by use How long do you suppose Rosalie? would keep her beaux if you and I were stuck there under their noses all the time? They'd take it as a prying impertinence on our part and serve us right, too. It is about time, Theophilus, that Rosalie should have the parlor to herself; she was eighteen last June."

"Yes; I remember," said Mr. Jones; "the month of roses, Maria. And she is the sweetest rose we have ever owned. It's hard to put her out of our hands in this way, wife. I love to watch her winsome ways, and hear the sweet tones of her voice. Her tricks and witcheries are dearer to me, I'll wager, than to any of the empty-headed coxcombs that flock about our young maid."

"Yes," said Mrs. Jones, "you love to watch and listen, and there ain't a young man now-a-days that will stand such a thing. You'll have our young maid an old maid; then, perhaps, you'll be satisfied."

Mr. Jones smiled gently, but incredulously.

"On the other side of the Atlantic, my dear," he said, "they manage things better than we do. The lads and lasses there contrive to fall in love and marry right under the eyes of the old folks. And it gives one a chance to get used to the wrench of parting; and, mayhap, if the parents ar over-lucky, they grow fond of the marauder himself."

"Now stop there, Mr. Jones," said his wife, putting the chairs to the table. "I know what you mean. I know which of Rosalie's admirers is your favorite; and how can you stand the idea of throwing away your only daughter on that miserable Scotchman up stairs, with an invalid mother hanging on his hands, and no salary to speak of or to look forward to—how can you be so indifferent and criminal to the future of Rosalie, I can't see. For my part I hate foreigners. An American was good enough for me; though, goodness knows, since you've got to be such a toady to their ways that you might just as well be a serf yourself."

Here Mrs. Jones rang the breakfast bell, and down trooped the boys and Rosalie.

Why she put up her front hair in pins it would be hard to say. Surely it was curly enough already; and her eyes had all the blue of heaven in their dancing depths. Her eyebrows seemed on a perpetual spree of running up to meet the waves of her hair; her nose also flung itself to those delectable heights. There was a dimple in her chin, and her short upper lip half hid a row of exquisite teeth. There wasn't a regular feature there, but somehow her face was a delightful resting place for the eyes that happened to be near.

"I hope you havn't wanted me, mama," she said. "I thought you and Bridget could get along down here, and I'd just run in and tidy up a little for Mrs. Graham. Her door was opened as I passed. She was sitting in a chair washing up the breakfast things, and looking so wretched and ill, ma, you can't think. It's dreadful for Joe to have to go away so early."

Mrs. Jones winced at this familiar rendering of the hated Scotchman's name, but she remembered that Rosalie was given to abreviating the titles of her acquaintances.

"She hasn't eaten a mouthful of breakfast," pursued Rosalie, "and her face is as white as the wall."

"I'll poach an egg and toast some bread for her by-and-by," said Mrs. Jones, who was by no means a hard-hearted woman because she wanted her daughter to have the parlor to herself and make a good match.

Nevertheless the chief object of interest just now was the advertising sheet of the Herald.

"How would you like to live out of town?" she said at last; "to take a little place in the suburbs, where we could have a garden and raise our vegetables?"

Mr. Jones kept a judicious silence, remembering the experience of some of his friends.

"Oh," said Rosalie, "wouldn't it be nice? To have a vine-covered porch, and lots of flowers, and hanging-baskets, and tubs of ferns, and—and everything."

"I'll get a Spanish cock and hens" said Bob; "it'll be bully."

"And let's have some pigeons and a bulltirrier," said Charley. "Hooray!"

Mr. Jones smiled, and went away to the store. While Mrs. Jones and her daughter were about household cares intent they talked the matter over, as only an American matron and her daughter to talk over family matters. There is one very good point in the American social arrangements that will not perhaps be found in better appointed households abroad. The self-reliant independence which Mr. Jones was inclined to deprecate was conducive to full and complete confidence and companionship; and although Rosalie was little more than a child, the whole brunt of no undertaking was allowed to fall full upon Mr. Jones.

It was decided that Rosalie should attend to the house during these troublesome days of March, and that mamma should have no cares but those connected with house hunting.

"I'm sorry to give up the house on account of Graham's," said Mrs. Jones, with a searching look at her daughter. "They'll have to move, of course, for the landlord won't rent the upper floor separately."

"Oh, Joe will take care of that," said Rosalie. "He'll manage for them in some way; and besides, mama, we can have her out to visit us, and get her cream, and strawberries and new-laid eggs, and—and everything."

Mrs. Jones found during her conversation that Rosalie's heart was not yet given over to the obnoxious Scotchman; that she knew, of course, he admired her; but goodness gracious, that was nothing! She liked him, too; he was so good-hearted; but, dear me, there was plenty of good hearts at her service, she hoped. So the landlord was advised of the change, and although sorry to part with good tenants was courteously resigned.

"It's very nice of him," said Mrs. Jones one evening, after a fruitless tramp to the country—it's very kind of the landlord not to put up a bill right away. One can't help feeling houseless and homeless after that."

"I'm glad, then," said Joe Graham, who began to drop in every night now, and talk over their outlook for a home—"I'm glad I've made up my mind to take the house myself. I've had the refusal all along, but hesitated. I've concluded to take the responsibility of letting the upper room to lodgers. Some of our boys at the store have engaged them, and I can afford then to get a good servant for mother. I think she'll like this chamber, it is so pleasant and roomy."

Mrs. Jones looked at the Scotchman with a rising ire in her still handsome blue eyes.

"The impudence of it," she said, when Joe had gone up stairs; "to coolly prospect around and shove people out of their own house to make room for his mother! Pleasant and roomy!" repeated poor Mrs. Jones, looking about her upon the wide, bright, spacious room. "I should think it was. There's your Scotch blood for you—canny, they call it. Yes, indeed, he'll get along if he has to push everybody else to the wall to do it. The idea of that Joe Graham hiring the house over our heads."

"But, my dear," said Mr. Jones, "why not Joe as well as another? I'm glad the poor lady can be so comfortable."

"Of course, of course," said Mrs. Jones. "Glad! you'd be delighted to have your own flesh and blood in the street to accommodate a foreigner."

Rosalie, who was sitting on the arm of her papa's chair, here pressed his hand warningly, and presently went over to her mother, and began to comb the whitening, but abundant locks of that poor, tired house-hunting woman.

Yes, Heaven knows she was weary and sick at heart with her undertaking. Day after day she had plodded on with that dogged pluck and perseverance which were the main points in her character, and day after day she became more and more disheartened and hopeless.

None but suburban house-hunters and a pitying Creator can conceive the dreariness with which Mrs. Jones set out on the day after Joe's revelation that he had taken the house for himself.

She hurried breathlessly to the train, to wait a full hour at the depot, and studied in the meanwhile the meagre advertisement of the rural landholder. Leaving the train at a station overhanging the railroad, seemingly a part there of, and having no apparent connection with a collection of houses in the distance, she began to walk and walk—past empty lots and sunken commons, through streets just begun and others half completed, all of them ending in huge chaotic pits, where the filling-in process had been temporarily abandoned. Not a creature within sight, except a goat or two, which animal is always suggestive of misery to the denizens of a city.

At last she reached the shed set apart for a real estate office and found it closed. The agent was away; no hotel or restaurant near. The March wind began to rise and roar, and blow the red dust of these desert streets into her eyes and nostrils. Faint with hunger and weariness, she dragged herself back to the station just in time to hear the toot of the engine and see the outgoing of the homeward train.

"Just an hour and a half to wait," said the station-master; and back in search of the house agent went Mrs. Jones. This time he was in, and urbanely desirous of taking her to the desired premises. Then they began to walk and walk again, till her head seemed to leave her shoulders and go up in the air, and her body to leave her legs, which went walking and walking on. At last a row of new brick houses reared themselves before her on the brink of one of those dismal gorges, the back kitchen propped up by posts, the chimneys topped by queer monsters to induce them to draw—a whole row of staring brick houses with little court-yards in front, and a funeral urn in the middle of what looked like a newly-made grave. The agent opened the first of the iron gates to these little court-yards, and entered.

"Why, this isn't the cottage advertised, is it," asked poor Mrs. Jones—that isn't a cottage at all. It's a house, a regular brick house."

"We call them cottages out here," said the agent, mildly; "we call them brick cottages. But walk in."

Which was easier said than done, the occupant opening the door an inch and parleying with the agent.

"You'll be coming here before breakfast, and after we go to bed, the next thing," she said. But seeing the white, wan face of Mrs. Jones, she added, "Come in and sit down; you do look beat out. Yes, ma'am, there's three rooms on this floor—"

"Four," said the agent.

"Well, if you call that cubby-hole under the stairs a room, all right—and they're every one as damp as they can be. With this roaring fire here, you can see for yourself, the paper's peelin' off the walls. There's a laundry down stairs—yes" (to the agent). "Don't you be afraid I'll forget the laundry. It's a very handy laundry, 'cause the water is knee-deep there all the time; least ways, it comes and goes with the tide in the back lots there. There's four rooms up stairs—as cold as Greenland, in the winter, and as hot as Africa, in the summer. There ain't a garret or a loft that you can tuck away as much as an old hoop-skirt. But come on up stairs. I'll show you the hull premises."

Mrs. Jones declined. She was not quite able to continue her work that day. Could she (turning to the agent) get a hack in the vicinity to take her to the station again? She didn't feel very well, and a storm had gathered. The snow began to whirl around in the front lots and back lots that comprised the view, covering up the ashes and garbage, falling into the pits from whence the dirt had been taken, and upon the heaps where dirt had been thrown.

A hack? Well no; there wasn't any hacks to be had. A conveyance of any kind, for which she would willingly pay? Well, no, he didn't know of any. If she'd take his arm he'd help her down to the station. And, more dead than alive, the poor lady found herself again walking. The agent put her on the train, glad to get rid of what seemed an impending evil; for she looked bad; very bad; and there was no place in Rosedale for people to be sick that he knew of.

But a hack was to be had in the metropolis, which Mrs. Jones reached at night-fall, and she fell from the steps of the coach into the arms of her astonished and terrified husband.

"Don't be alarmed, dear," she whispered, "don't mind, Toffy; but I'm going to die, I think."

"Hold on!" cried Mr. Jones to the hackman. Then he carried his wife into the house and jumping into the cab, went after the family physician.

"She must be very bad," whispered Mr. Jones to himself. "She hasn't called me Toffy, nor put her arms about me in that way, since our honeymoon." And none but those who have so few marital caresses are able to appreciate them.

The doctor looked grave, ordered perfect quiet, a sedative. The next morning he looked graver still. Ice was put upon the poor lady's head, which rolled helplessly to and fro upon the pillow. And there she lay for four long weeks.

It was a season of wretchedness and despair. Nobody knew how dear and necessary was this rather sharp and preemptory matron till there was an imminent danger of losing her. Then all was remembered and clung to tearfully.

Jones found his heart contracting with agony, and could think of no way in which life would be endurable without her. To contend with business cares, to shape the future of this pretty Rosalie, to manage these three boisterous boys, without Maria—without Mrs. Jones!

"My God! Joe," he cried that night, bowing his head upon the marble table and bursting into tears, "I shall go mad."

"Hush! take heart. There's a faint hope," said Joe, coaxing the cold, trembling fingers of Rosalie into his keeping.

Oh, what would they have done without him, these Joneses, who knew naught of sickness save the little ills that yonder fainting hand upon the bed had guided safely to health again? Joe had dealt with it all his life. He knew and had tested well all the help that could be gained from human aid, and when that was hopeless, knew also how to wait manfully the decree of the inevitable.

That dreadful night not an eye closed in the house, save, perhaps the tear-swollen ones of the boys. Mrs. Graham remained on her knees hour after hour, and who can tell but the prayers of that pure, good lady were of avail? Early in the day, Mrs. Jones had fallen into a slumber, which the doctor had said would probably lead from unconsciousness into death. But the next morning, though still asleep, her pulse was stronger; a gentle perspiration bathed her forehead. The doctor's eye gleamed suddenly with hope, and he drove them all down into the front basement to tell them that perhaps there was indeed a moderate chance for the life of Mrs. Jones.

Which soon ripened into a certainty. Once giving that good lady a foot-hold upon the shore again, there was not much danger of her drifting out. She became gradually conscious of all that happened.

"It was the wonderful goodness of God," said pure and gentle Mrs. Graham.

"And, under Heaven, my strong constitution," said Mrs. Jones, "that was proof against house-hunting; and more is due to the care and nursing of your strong, good son. God bless him, anyway!" she said, tears rolling out of her eyes, "I'm glad he's got the house, as long as we haven't. We must begin to look about us now; it must be well on to the 1st of May."

Then her weak, wandering sight began to fall on each well-beloved article of furniture filling its appointed place, upon the still bright and cheery carpet that had been fitted to the parlors so many years ago, upon this and that bracket on the wall, this and that niche for familiar household goods.

"Oh, dear!" she cried to herself, piteously, "am I going now to be a weak, mandlin woman, and cry over what can't be helped?"

"Joe," she said that night to young Graham, "I wish you'd look up a house for us. Jones isn't worth a pin that way, and you see how it is. Do, like a good boy, just get us a place in the city, as near by as you can."

"Why, Mrs. Jones," said Joe, "I'm sorry if it displeases you, but we were compelled to do something, and I thought perhaps you wouldn't mind just living as we are for another year—mother and I up stairs and you down, in the old way."

"In the dear, blessed old way," murmured Mrs. Jones, holding out to him her shaking hands. "God bless you, Joe!"

And he did bless him. Of that you may be sure.

—Little Billy has been taken to see his old uncle, who is so deaf that he cannot hear a single word without recourse to his ear-trumpet. Billy watches the movements of his instrument for some time with great interest, and then exclaims: "Mamma, what does uncle try all the time to play the horn with his ear for, when he can't make it go?"

—The venerable wife of a celebrated physician one day casting her eyes out of the window observed her husband in the funeral procession of one of his patients, at which she exclaimed, "I do wish my husband would keep away from such processions. It appears so much like a tailor carrying home his own work."

Diphtheria.

As this terrible epidemic is at present so prevalent in our community, where its effects are so fearfully fatal, the following from the New Haven Register may prove of benefit to those who may be afflicted with the terrible disease:—

Diphtheria is both a contagious and an infectious disease; it is, moreover, pre eminently one of the class of filth diseases—that is, it occurs most frequently and in the most malignant and fatal form where dampness and dirt do most prevail. The means of protection, therefore, obviously lie in avoidance of exposure to its presence and in the most scrupulous attention to cleanliness.

Absolute isolation to the sick, the most rigid purity of surroundings, aided by disinfection when required, would probably exterminate the disease. The veteran sanitarian, Dr. E. M. Snow, of Providence, says that where there is abundant sunlight, dryness, cleanliness and pure air, diphtheria cannot prevail. The same condition will protect almost effectually from most other dangerous diseases. Such being the truth, neither individuals nor committees can afford to ignore the fact that they are in a great degree responsible for their own health.

When a case occurs in any family the sick person should be placed in a room apart from the other inmates of the house, and should be nursed as far as possible by one person only. The sick chamber should be well warmed, well aired and exposed to sunlight; its furniture should be such as can be cleansed without injury, and all superfluous things, such as window and table drapery, woolen carpets and the like, should be removed. The family should not mingle with other people. Visitors should be warned of the presence of a contagious disease, and children should not be admitted to the house.

All clothing removed from the patient should be at once placed in boiling water; instead of handkerchiefs, soft pieces of linen or cotton cloth should be used and immediately burned. Disinfectants should be placed in all the vessels which receive the expectoration or other discharges from the patient. Disinfectants should also be freely used in the sick-room. Those which destroy bad odors without causing others are best, such as solutions of nitrate of lead and chloride of zinc.

The sick person should not mingle with others until fully recovered, and in cases of scarlet fever until all roughness of the skin, due to the disease, has disappeared, because the exfoliated skin is especially infectious.

The disinfection of the sick-room should be thorough. The walls should be dry-rubbed and the cloths used burned without shaking, the ceiling should be scraped and lime washed. The floor and wood work should be washed with soap and water. The clothing or bedding used by the patient or nurse should be purified by boiling for at least one hour, and should always be cleansed by themselves, and under no circumstances should they be sent to a laundry. In case of death, the body should be placed as early as practicable in the coffin with disinfectants, and the coffin tightly closed.

Children certainly, and in most cases adults, should not attend a funeral from a house in which a death from diphtheria or scarlet fever has occured. But with suitable precautions it is not necessary that the burial should be strictly private, provided that the corpse be not in any way exposed.

Because children are especially liable to take and spread these diseases, and because schools afford a free opportunity for this, every child from any family in which a case of either of these diseases has occured should be excluded from school, and be readmitted not sooner than one month from the beginning of the disease, except upon the certificate of some competent physician that it will be safe.

All the above precautions concern the dangers of contagion. But the continued prevalence of these diseases in any community is probable evidence of insanitary surroundings and of sources of sickness, partially or wholly preventable. The most exemplary housewife, whose home is the very model of neatness and order, may have all her efforts defeated in a sanitary sense by a defective sink trap or a leaky water pipe, or an overflowing cesspool, or an undrained cellar, or even by a heap of decaying garbage in her neighbor's yard.

Therefore, look well to the surroundings. Abolish filth, remove dampness and all sources of foul air, especially from the living and sleeping rooms. Disinfect thoroughly all suspected places in yards and neglected corners.

The following disinfectant is both very cheap and efficient: Take of copperas (sulphate of iron) five pounds, and dissolve in three gallons of water.

—In a Connecticut district school a little boy, six years old, was seen to whisper, but denied doing so when reproved by the teacher. He was told to remain after school, when the teacher was trying to impress upon his youthful mind the sinfulness of not speaking the truth, asked if they did not tell him in the Sunday school where all boys went who told falsehoods. Choking with sobs he said: "Yes, marm; it's a place where there is fire, but I don't remember the name of the town."

—A young woman from the rural districts entered a dry goods store the other day and asked for a pair of stockings. The clerk politely asked her what number she wore. "Why, two, you fool. Do you think I am a centipede, or that I have a wooden leg?"

How Modern Implements of Archery Are Manufactured.

In Rhode Island there is a large factory used entirely for making the costly bows and arrows used in the pretty sport of lawn archery. Thoroughly seasoned pine boards are cut into small strips which are again cut into lengths suitable for arrows. A machine takes these angular strips and ejects them perfectly rounded. The best arrows are footed with a wedge of heavier wood. While the glueing and the polishing of the wood is going on in one part of the room, the horn in which the notch is cut is making out of pieces shaped and hollowed to fit over the wood of the arrow, which also receives at the point a covering of brass or steel. The arrow is now taken up stairs to be feathered and decorated. The stiff feathers of the turkey are used and are obtained from Chicago. A young girl strips the feathers from the midrib, keeping several busy trimming them into proper shapes, while others glue the pieces to the arrow, which, polished, stained, and coated with shellac or varnish, has been prepared for them, little slits having been made in them by a machine at the right distances. Some of the feathers are colored red and green. This is generally the case with the cock feather, as the one at right angles with the notch is called, for the reason that it shows which way the arrow is placed on the string. In another room we find a woman decorating the arrows with bands of bright colors above the feathers.

After this the arrows are weighed, the number of their weight is stamped upon them, and they are packed for transportation in quivers of a dozen each.

Many kinds of wood are used in making bows, among which are some beautifully variegated woods from South America. The lance and hickory take the lead among the common varieties, and the elegant snake-wood, backed with hickory, makes one of the nicest bows that is made. The snake-wood takes a beautiful polish, and owing to its responsive nature sends the arrow farther and with more certainty than a bow made of any other kind of wood. The nicest bows are planed by hand, great care being required to make the sides curve exactly alike, as any deviation injures the efficiency of the bow. The ends of the bow are carved out of horn. Ox horns are used, whole bags of which, sent from New York were shown to us in the cellar. The nicest bows are tipped with buffalo horn. It takes a long course of cutting, planing, glueing, bending, polishing, staining and varnishing to make a bow ready. A piece of cork is shaped and glued to the center and covered with plush to make the handle. The power of the bow is measured by the number of pounds it pulls, a spring scale being used for the purpose of showing this. A bow pulling thirty pounds is considered the right thing for a lady, and fifty pounds for a gentleman.—N. Y. Post.

Health Hints.

Never go to bed with cold, damp feet; always toast them before a fire for ten or fifteen minutes befor going to bed.

When going from a warm atmosphere to a colder one, keep the mouth closed, so that the air may be warmed by its passage through the nose, ere it reaches the lungs.

Never stand still in cold weather, especially after having taken a slight degree of exercise; and always avoid standing upon the ice or snow, or where the person is exposed to a cold wind.

Never take warm drinks and then immediately go out in the cold air.

Merely warm the back by a fire, and never continue keeping the back exposed to the heat after it has become comfortably warm; to do otherwise is debilitating.

When hoarse, speak as little as possible until it is recovered from, else the voice may be permanently lost, or difficulties of the throat may be produced.

Never begin a journey until breakfast has been eaten.

Keep the back, especially between the shoulder blades, well covered; also the chest well protected.

Never lean the back upon anything that is cold.

Never omit regular bathing; for unless the skin is in active condition the cold will close the pores and favor congestion and other diseases.

Some of the most valuable constituents of the wheat are left in the bran, and the fine flour is not sufficiently laxative to meet the requirements of most systems, so it is advisable to take frequently or sympathetically a coarser diet. Graham, cracked wheat or rye will generally meet this want, or a fair supply of berries or fruits will answer a similar purpose. Proper attention to the diet will generally obviate the necessity of a resort to physic, and is by far the preferable course in every aspect of the case.

To cure corns, take one measure of coal or gas tar, one of saltpeter and one of brown sugar; mix well. Take a piece of an old kid glove and spread a plaster on it the size of the corn and apply to the part affected; bind on and leave two or three days and then remove, and the corn will come with it.

—A father never thinks his ten-year-old son is stronger than a horse until he employs him to turn the grind stone to sharpen an old axe that is about as sharp at one end as at the other. The old man bears on until the lad's eyes bulge out and his trouser's buckle flies off, and just before he bursts a blood vessel his father encourages him with the remark, "Does it turn hard?" Thousand of boys have run away from home and become pirates and greenbackers in order to escape a siege at the grind stone.

—Grace Greenwood relates as an instance of the extravagance of New England humor, that what when a young farmer's wife made her first boy's pants precisely as simple before as behind, the farmer exclaimed: "Goodness, he won't know whether he is going to school or coming home!"

Additional Local Matters.

—The cheapest place in town is S. & A. Loeb's.

—S. & A. Loeb will not be undersold by anybody.

—"Don't forget it," S. & A. Loeb sell cheap for cash.

—Weddings on four successive Thursdays. Next!

—For its neat compliment to our maiden effort the Democrat will please accept our thanks.

—Three cheers and a "Tiger" for the man who sports Harry Green's cigars between his lips.

—The latest go-as-you-please match is among the many going after 7-for-25-cents "Pets" sold by Harry Green.

—The Presbyterian Sabbath-school has adopted Gospel Hymns, Nos. 1, 2 and 3 combined.

—Miss Lizzie Coble now resides in Pottsville. The Forge Sabbath-school will miss her sadly.

—S. & A. Loeb have received, within the past week, thousands of dollars' worth of boots and shoes for men, women and children.

—Miss Lide Thomas left yesterday for California, instead of last Thursday as announced. She met friends in Altoona who will make the trip with her.

—Mr. Wm. Beck is teaching the yonng idea how to sing in the neighborhood of the new school-house where Mr. J. M. Holmes is the presiding genius.

—More solid comfort for the money can be obtained from one of Harry Green's "Bon-Bons" than can be gotten out of the same amount of capital invested any other way.

—The best meat in town can be had at the meat store of Sechler & Co., as all can testify who trade there. If any of our readers are not Sechler's customers, we advise them to become so at once.

—Sechler & Co., in the Bush House block, are as full of business as ever, and are selling the best goods in the market cheaper for cash than can be obtained elsewhere. Call and see them.

—Messrs. Gentzell & Bitner, who had a grain thresher and separator manufactory here last spring, have discontinued their works in Bellefonte, and now are seeking to establish them in Lock Haven. Sorry to lose the industry.

—The Houtz heirs felt so enormously good over their success in the late ejectment case tried here that they spread a bountiful banquet in the Arlington house, Houtzdale, lately, inviting guests from Bellefonte, Huntingdon, Clearfield, and other places.

—Mr. R. A. Laird has now as pretty a residence as there is in his part of the town, with all the advantages of commanding position and extended view. Should the Brisbins look into our town now they would hardly recognize the old property, so great has the transformation been.

—Of course "life is all a troublous sea," but if any of its waters require more careful navigating than that little stretch of pavement from the post-office up to the Baptist Church when the way is icy, we want to see them, but don't let us tempt Providence by doing anything more than seeing them.

—All sorts of rumors have been floating round town that a five-barrel well has been struck at Stump Creek, a few miles from Troutville, this county, but just inside the Jefferson county line. From reliable sources we learn that oil has been struck at a depth of 1750 feet, but not as yet in a paying quantity. The State Geologist has examined the strata and says that a few feet more drilling will penetrate fourth sand, at which point oil will flow in large quantities if at all. The trouble now is to case the well so as to do away with about 1,200 feet of water now in the well. It is proposed to draw the present casing down a few hundred feet, and put in new casing the full depth, then drill through to fourth sand. The excitement around the creek is at a high pitch, and the stockholders are confident that they have struck the oil belt which is supposed to run through Jefferson and Clearfield counties. One thing is certain, the oil now taken from the well is of excellent quality and there is oil there. We have hardly any doubt but that the well will "pan out" big as soon as the drill penetrates fourth sand.—Clearfield Times.

—It is a sorry comment on Democracy, indeed, when its upholders raise an outcry against such a man as Dr. Fowler, and such a lecture as was delivered by him in this town. A pity that their political opinions have so blinded their eyes and distorted their better judgment, that they decry eloquence, when it lays a fitting tribute on the tomb of the martyred President, or tells a funny anecdote of a great Union commander. We do not believe the better class of Democrats—few though they be—are bigoted enough in their opinions to give their assent to such a specimen of political cant as the communication from "No Grant" in last week's Watchman. Doubtless had the speaker lauded Jeff Davis, Fort Pillow Chambers, or other Democratic worthies, that paper would have "gushed" forth into "ecstasy."

—We have already noticed the establishment of a night school under the care of Mr. J. M. Duncan and assistants. The curriculum has been extended, now embracing, besides reading, spelling, commercial arithmetic, grammar and composition for both primary and advanced scholars, book-keeping and mechanical draughting, for which suitable teachers offer their services, provided scholars are found who desire them. The very reasonable charges bring the school within the reach of all. Only $2.50 per month (50 cents extra for book-keeping) is all that is asked for instruction four evenings in the week. Those desiring further information on this subject may obtain it by calling on Mr. Duncan.

—Philipsburg station was robbed last Tuesday night a week, $13 in silver and four tickets to Harrisburg being taken, and on the following night Wallaceton, Bigler and Blue Ball stations were entered and robbed. On Thursday two men giving their names as Thomas Murray and James O'Neil, were arrested and plead guilty before 'Squire Crissman, at Phillipsburg, by whom they were sent to the Bellefonte jail the same evening in default of $500 bail. Now, sheriff, lay a sticky finger on these fellows.

—Samuel Ryan, our new engineer at the water works is proving himself to be one of the most industrious and competent employes our borough has ever had at the water works. He handles tools with the aptness of a skilled workman, and the machinery has not looked so cleanly and neat for several years. He invites our citizens to call and examine for themselves. They will always find him at his post during working hours, which is quite a new feature in this department of our borough affairs.

—No more eager and attentive readers has the REPUBLICAN than the two eldest little boys of Mr. Daniel Rhodes, Eddie and Joe. Though the hour be often early and the weather unpleasant, most always are they at the gate to receive the carrier with a pleasant "good morning." Were all newspaper readers so appreciative, less grudgingly would the editor spend the midnight oil, laboring with his pen to please the mighty Public.

—Mr. Thomas R. Reynolds and Rev. John Hewitt left us yesterday to make a trip to Colorado. Mr. Reynolds goes to see his son, have a good time and, perhaps, help develop the resources of the Centennial State. Whether Rev. Mr. Hewitt intends treeing a grizzly with his trusty rifle, or will content himself with glass-ball fame, we are still in the dark.

—S. & A. Loeb have the largest assortment of boots, shoes and slippers, for ladies, gentlemen and children, to be found in Bellefonte. Call and examine their immense stock.

—There must be some very unappreciative people in Port Matilda.—A short time ago Dame Rumor positively asserted that a certain bachelor citizen of that town had taken to himself a spouse, and straightway his fellow-townsfolk favored him with a serenade, calling all manner of instruments into requisition. The gentleman in question very strangely didn't take kindly to the music, particularly as the report was wrong—he hadn't left the state of single blessedness—and a few days after summons were served upon the serenaders, causing them, one and all, boys and girls, men and women, to appear before the "Port" dispenser of justice. The city court house was crowded with criminals and spectators, and the scene was one of indescribable confusion, loud cheering and laughter drowning every other sound whenever anything funny was elicited. After a very amusing hearing the delinquents were dismissed with a small fine for disturbing the peace, and the costs of proceedings. Port people will not be quite so "previous" hereafter in offering their musical congratulations.

—Augustus Hoover, of the firm of J. C. Miller & Co., book-sellers, on Allegheny street, next door to the post-office, is in Philadelphia purchasing a large quantity of goods for the Christmas holidays. All who will want presents for their children or friends should not fail to examine the large stock that will be offered by this firm. They will have the largest and finest assortment in town, without any exception, and at prices within the reach of the leanest pocket-book. Then it is a pleasure to buy at this place, for John and Gus. are the most affable, gentlemanly merchants in Bellefonte. Call and see if they are not.

—Notwithstanding the boasting of other merchants, S. & A. Loeb have the largest stock of clothing to be found in any store outside of Philadelphia, and they will sell cheaper than others who pretend to be selling out at cost. While the Loebs do business to make a living, they are determined not to be undersold by any one.

—Harry Teats, who is with the firm of Sechler & Co., has returned from the West, and is as active as ever in the interest of his employers. A faithful servant is a prize, which any business man may with reason look upon as a blessing. Sechler holds a trump card as long as he keeps our friend Teats in his employ.

—Notwithstanding the good news of Wednesday and the fact of his having been the Secretary of our Commonwealth, Hon. John B. Linn was not a bit too much puffed up to shovel the snow off his pavement last Thursday morning. He got it clean, too. If Mr. Linn were only an editor or a school-teacher he would not stoop to such.

—No wonder S. & A. Loeb can sell cheaper than any one else—they have the means and shrewdness to take advantage of the market. They have just received thousands of dollars worth of goods, in anticipation of a rise. Their customers will reap the advantage of their forethought. All they want is a fair profit on their goods.

—The Clearfield coal trade is growing. A statement of coal sent over the Tyrone and Clearfield division, for the week ending Oct. 25th, gives 46,649 as the week's tonnage, and 1,252,533 tons for the year since Jan. 1st, 1879, an increase over 1878 of 12,600 tons for the week and 215,559 tons for the year.

—Meetings at quarter past seven every evening this week, after tonight, in the Young Men's Rooms. Open to all. Be sure and attend them, for by so doing you will be the more interested in the Anniversary services next Sabbath evening in the Presbyterian church.

—V. E. Piollet, Esq., master, has issued an order calling the annual meeting of the State Grange at Bloomsburg, on December 9th.

—Ladies, call and examine the finest stock of goods of every description at S. & A. Loeb's on Allegheny street.

—It is reported that Philipsburg is about to go heavily into the brick business.

—Farmers and lumbermen can find what they want at S. & A. Loeb's.

—The largest stock of goods in Centre county at S. & A. Loeb's.

—Everything—everything, and so cheap, at S. & A. Loeb's.

A Surprised Physician.

A DYING PATIENT RECOVERS THRO' THE INTERPOSITION OF AN HUMBLE GERMAN.—Some weeks ago Dr. G——, a very reputable and widely-known physician, living on C—— street, was called to attend a very complicated case of rheumatism. Upon arriving at the house he found a man about 40 years of age, lying in a prostrated and serious condition, with his whole frame dangerously affected with the painful disease. He prescribed for the patient, but the man continued to grow worse, and on Sunday evening he was found to be in an alarming condition. The knees and elbows and larger joints were greatly inflamed and could not be moved. It was only with extreme difficulty that the patient could be turned in bed, with the aid of three or four persons. The weight of the clothing was so oppressive that means had to be adopted to keep it from the patient's body.

The doctor saw that his assistance would be of no avail, and left the house, the members of the family following him to the door, weeping. At this critical hour a neighbor, a poor and humble German shoemaker, appeared to the grief-smitten ones as a saving-angel. He had heard of the despair of the family, and now asked them to try his remedy, and accordingly brought forth a bottle of ST. JACOBS OIL. As a drowning man will catch at straws, so the poor wife applied this remedy; she had no hope, but would try anything as a matter of duty. The first application eased the patient very much; after hours they used it again, and wonder of wonders, the pain vanished entirely! Every subsequent application improved the sufferer, and in two days he was well and out. When the doctor called a few days after he was indeed surprised; for, instead of a corpse he found a new-made man.—Exchange.

—Owing to the press of other matter we did not notice last week the departure of Mr. James Ryman, of Mile-burg for Montana, where he will take a fairly lucrative position in a Missoula City graded school. Mr. R. had a long journey before him, one hundred miles of it in a stage, but by t is time we trust he has finished the tiresome trip. Milesburg loses one of her best and most gifted young men, but we think Mr. Ryman will find in the "Great West" larger opportunities for development, and his dauntless energy will aid him in that new country. Success to you, Jim, and may you come again to us bringing with you health, wealth, and perhaps a bonnie Rocky Mountain lassie to see "the old folks at home."

—The Curtin township judge of election was so dilatory in making his returns that Judge Orvis sent the Sheriff after him last Tnursday to bring him to time. The law requires that the proper officers shall give in their returns from their respective polling places on the day after election if twelve miles from the county-seat, on the second day after by 12 o'clock M, if the place of voting is more than 12 miles distant.

—Mr. Henry Harris has just completed a handsome all-walnut book-case for Johnny Kurtz. The pattern is very ornamental and unique, entirely the design of Mr. Proudfoot, whose skillful labor wrought it out. What J. K., wants of a book-case without a wife to dust and arrange the shelves is a wonder to us, Now Johnny don't you think it the best thing to follow Frank's example.

—Beaver has met with the same misfortune as Bellefonte—a jail delivery. On the 3d inst. six men made their escape, the overcrowding of the jail and consequent lack of precautionary measures aiding them to get away so easily.

—To the casual observer it looks as though a man who can live without working at all might accumulate considerable wealth in a year's time by working for $2 per diem. Especially if he would purchase his groceries and meat of Sechler & Co., in the Bush House block.

—Nuts, confectionary, fruits, queensware, woodenware, tobacco, cigars of the finest brands, and other things too numerous to mention, at Sechler & Co's, on High street.

—It only took Thad. Longwell and Charlie Tripple from Sunday afternoon till late Monday Morning to go up to the College and return—with a lady.

—The neatest store in town is kept by Sechler & Co. You can go and see for yourselves, and not take our word for it.

The following vote was cast for Richardson, Prohibitionist: Bellefonte, North Ward—7; West Ward—1; Milesburg 5; Unionville 16; Howard Borough 1; Liberty 19; Union 10; Haines 4. In all 60.

—The late Gen. Burns, of Lewistown, owned somewhat property which he devised to his relatives as below. Gen. Burns was quite well known to many Centre countians, who will be interested about the distribution of his property:

Mrs. Burns retains the town mansion, with its furniture, except the piano which goes to his granddaughter, Miss Cartes Allison; a horse and carriage, and annuity of $500 from two farms, and $150 from the property given to Mrs. Morrison. His sister, Mrs. Sarah Osborne, will remain with Mrs. Burns; Mrs. O. also gets annuities amounting to $600, and a garden lot.

To J. Ritz Burns, and his children, certain farm lands near the Lewistown depot, which are very valuable.

To Mrs. E. M. Allison, a large amount of land in the borough of Lewistown and in the Juniata valley; and also a number of valuable dwelling houses within the borough and near the railroad depot.

To Mrs. S. S. Spangler, land and dwelling house within the borough and a farm.

To Mrs. Mary J. Morrison, a farm and lot near the railroad depot.

The Buoy lots are to be divided among the heirs.

Each devise of land will range in the neighborhood of 250 acres.

The executors are J. C. Lyter, Andrew Reed and J. Ritz Burns.

—Wonder how many of our readers in Bellefonte have ever made the excursion to Perdue's mountain? No more enjoyable ride or walk can be found in this neighborhood, we think. You go up by the very ideal of mountain roads, cut in the sides of the rocks, the mountain ascending sharply from the path on one side, a deep ravine with its dashing waters on the other, while above and all around is the flaming drapery of autumn, till you reach the fine farms and extended view at the summit. We do not think that many here have taken advantage of the nearness of this truly beautiful road, and our horsebackers can not do better than take this ride before the breath of Indian summer leaves us finally.

—A very old lady on her deathbed in a penitential mood said: "I have been a great sinner more than eighty years, and didn't know it." An old darkey woman, who had lived with her a long time, exclaimed: "Lor! I knowed it all the time." "About the best thing you ever did in your whole life, was to purchase your groceries at the famous store of Sechler & Co., in the Bush House block."

LADIES' WINE—SPEER'S PORT.—Pure—four years old—will not intoxicate—but possessing all the valuable medicinal properties of the Oporto grape, from which it is made. Used in hospitals and by first-class physicians as the best known wine for medical purposes. It is a tonic and astringent. It is not mixed with alcohol or other liquors, but is a mild, rich and pleasant tonic, improving the appetite and promoting digestion; as a diuretic, it acts beneficially on the kidneys and corresponding organs; as a sudorific, it acts upon the skin, destroying eruptions, and producing a soft, healthy and blooming complexion. Therefore, it is extensively and beneficially used by ladies, and is in general family use as a sure remedy for dysentery, and for all nervous, weak and debilitated persons. Sold by druggists and A. Speer, at his own vineyard, N. J.—Advertiser. For sale by J. W. Ziegler. 44-2t

—A prominent Congressman took his daughter to task the other evening because she permitted her lover to stay a while after ten o'clock. "La, pa," said she, "we were only holding a little extra session."

—The Pleasant Gap people sometimes worship under difficulties. At one of the churches not long since, the flue for some reason became choked up and the smoke having no way of egress, filled the church, administering liberal doses of vaporous creosote to the eyes of those present. Disgusted with the prospect, or rather absence of prospect, and decidedly objecting to this manner of future preservation, the congregation adjourned without waiting for the benediction. At the other church in the village, the collection had failed to come up to the requirements and they had no fires, on the principle of no money, no coal. As the people were not able to keep aglow by spiritual warmth, they concluded to continue the services at their dinner tables.

—A workman on a railroad at Florence, Italy, was run over and killed. His sweetheart laid herself on the track to die in the same manner, but the train only injured her arm, which was subsequently amputated. Still determined on suicide, she tore off the bandages and bled to death.

—"It is said that a minister in a country kirk in Scotland stopped in the course of his sermon to ask a member who was deaf, "Are ye hearin, John?" "Oh, aye," was the response, "I am hearing, but to verra little purpose."

—"How much are those tearful bulbs by the quart?" asked a maiden of a trades man the other morning. He stared at her a moment as if bewildered, but soon recovered himself, and bluffly said, "Oh, them inyuns? Tenpence."

—There are two kinds of bores in this world—the poor and the rich. You can get rid of of the latter by lending him five dollars. You can free yourself of the other by attempting to borrow twenty dollars of him. Try it on.

—An unsuccessful vocalist went to the poor-house and delighted the inmates with his singing. He said it was a natural thing for him to do, as he had been singing to poor houses ever since he began his career.

—Considering the rapid destruction of forests, very many thinkers profess to exercise of mind regarding the fuel of the future. They may rest assured, however, that good hot fires will be in some way provided.

—"A Norwich man calls himself on his card a "Temperance Bootmaker." The need of temperance boots is apparent; for, though they're not generally drunk, it's a notorious fact that they're often tight.

WINES FOR MEDICINE.—Some time since we stopped at Passaic, N. J., and were really surprised to see the amount of Mr. Speer's stock of Port Grape Wine on hand—it is almost fabulous. Four storehouses are filled, and tiers upon tiers of casks, up and down stairs, and in some cases huge vats occupy every available spot, leaving only little alley-ways through which to walk. It is an illimitless quantity of wine. None is sold until it has acquired the age of four years, and the buildings 1, 2, 3 and 4, are of the first, second, third and fourth year's vintage. Our druggists have some of the oldest of the above wine direct from Mr. Speer.—Paterson Guardian.

The wine is now in demand for communion purpose. It is excellent for weakly persons before retiring. For sale by J. W. Ziegler. 44-2t

Inheritance.

From time immemorial, until comparatively of recent date, the possessions of a father, on his death descend to his posterity, in some cases all to his oldest son, in others to all children, but in different proportions, and in others still to wife and children in equal amounts.

Innovations in this custom were made at different periods, and the state or the king claimed a portion of every estate, the rest being distributed. In still later years a person while living was permitted to dispose, by will to take effect at his death, of one-third of his property, the rest being divided between his widow and the king. The right of the king to any portion was afterwards contested, but that of the widow to her dower still remains intact, while the remainder, in case no will is made, is divided among the blood relations of the deceased in such way as is by the law provided.

When property has come into the possession of a person by inheritance, it seems right that it should pass down in the blood as it is termed, but wherein children or other relatives, the wife excepted, have any right to the property accumulated by another by his labor, skill or business capacity, we fail to see, and the fact that the law admits of a parent's right to dispose of his property without consulting his children, shows the growth of public opinion in the right direction. The children, however, do not seem to see it in that light. They appear to feel that the parent's duty is to roll up a competence, by labor if need be, that they may live lives of ease and luxury. Hence it is that we have so many contested wills and disputes about estates occupying the time of the courts, at great expense to the public who have no interest in the matter.

It is true that children do not come into the world of their own volition, and the responsibility of the parents is recognized in that they are obliged to support them during their infancy. It is supposed that every child is an expense until it arrives at the age of 10 or 12 years. From this age, for three or four years, it is considered able to earn its own support, and after that to the age of 21, to earn enough more than its necessary expenses to refund to the parents what they may have been out of pocket on its account during its infancy. In the present condition of society, the parent is usually considerably out of pocket when the child attains its majority, but that is, perhaps, not the fault of the child. The law supposes the accounts to be adjusted and the books balanced when the child is 21 years old, and sets out in the world for himself.

But whatever may be right as to inheritance of property, there are inheritances of other kinds that the child has an inherent right to demand from its parents, and which if they neglect to provide they do an injustice and a wrong that cannot be made good either in this world or in the next. First and most important of these rights is that of a good constitution, for on this one thing depends mainly the child's chances of success in all things. Above all money valuation is a sound mind in a sound body, and without the latter the former is seldom found. It is, the most solemn duty of the parents to so live, and obey the laws of their physical being, that their children shall inherit none of the ills that flesh is heir to, but be strong and vigorous. Further, it is now the universally received belief that children inherit from their parents mental as well as physical qualities, and that even to the third or fourth generation the peculiar characteristics of the ancestors can be found with more or less clearness in their offspring.

Has any parent a moral right to make his child a thief or drunkard? But thousands are so living to-day that children yet unborn will be what the lives of the parents now live will make them. We may not be able to trace depravity so far back as Adam, but an honest son is pretty good evidence of an honest father. Just so sure as the inordinate use of tobacco, alcohol, or opium in a parent begets a love of stimulants in his children, is it that the improper use of any of the moral or mental faculties will prove injurious to coming generations. We can only touch on these points; but are glad to be able to refer those interested in the subject to many valuable works now easily procured and which should be generally read.

Another inheritance parents should be proud to leave, is a good name. However much they may be lacking in worldly possessions, or vigor of mind or body, this is always within their reach. Rectitude and righteousness every man can have if he will; if he have them not, he deprives his children of a birth-right of no little value, besides weighing them down with a load that it may take a lifetime of earnest endeavor to get rid of.

Parents, think of these things, and for your own sakes as well as that of your children, live wisely, think rightly, act nobly, and you will leave such inheritance that your children will rise up and call you blessed.—Rural New Yorker.

Improved Stock.

But few of our practical stockmen are aware of the actual extent of the change produced in our domestic animals within the last half century. A single fact in relation to hogs may serve to illustrate this matter. Fifty years ago the farmer thought he was doing well if he brought his hogs to a net weight of two hundred pounds by keeping them through two winters. About the year 1820 an improved breed of hogs, known as "English swine," was introduced into this country from Cheshire, England. They were distinguished by ears like an elephant's, long sides and long bones. These often reached three hundred pounds in the prescribed life of a porker. About ten years later, the short-legged China pig made his appearance, and professed to be fit for the market with only one winter's feeding. This was a great improvement in the cost of pork; but there was an insurmountable objection to the Chinaman among swineherds—he could not travel to the market. This objection, however, was soon removed by a cross between these two imported breeds without sacrificing the early maturing quality of the China pig. Continuing the improvement in the line, we have reduced the period of twenty months as the marketable age of a pig to nine or ten months, and have advanced the standard weight to three hundred pounds. Indeed, the Poland Chinas of to-day scarcely bear any resemblance to the animal we used to hunt with dog and gun in the wild woods of Indiana.

It is true that it requires more food to keep a pig one year, in which time he will gain three hundred pounds, than it did to keep his predecessor the first year of his pig life, for you cannot make two hundred pounds of pork out of nothing; but it takes less food to make the same weight of pork in one year than in three. The point of early maturity is the important gain in our improved stock of every class. In horses it is not so well marked, but in cattle and poultry it is a feature nearly as prominent as in hog-raising. The question now is—when will we reach the limits of the possible in this direction?

Grumbling Breeds Demoralization.

If any patron is in the mood of grumbling because the wheels of progress do not revolve methodically in the groove of his liking, let him think twice before he emits utterances that would kindle demoralizing influences. He may have his notions on formality in Grange session, or on co-operative measures; but if he but hesitate momentarily he will, ninety-nine instances out of a hundred, be enabled to calculate unerringly the mischief that he would precipitate. Grumbling and facial contortions over subject-matter that does not coincide with his notions are invariably forerunners of demoralization in any organization under the sun. Therefore, in the name of harmony and unity, and for the sake of perpetuity of our cherished order, the Patrons of Husbandry, we counsel cheerful acquiescence in the proceedings of our Grange meetings, thereby snapping the rope of sand that our traducers would lash us with, who, like the cunning, sneaking fox, awaiting a favorable opportunity to snatch a sheep from the fold, are ever on the alert to improve the feeblest opportunity. Cease all grumbling. It breeds demoralization.—Farmers' Friend.

Farmers' Clubs.

Every year at the approach of cold weather, we have made it a point to urge upon our readers the duty of organizing a farmers' club in their respective neighborhoods. The subject is brought to us at this time, by an application for a form for constitution and by-laws, to govern such a club. In writing upon this subject hitherto, we have always advocated as little formality and red tape in the organization and conduct of such clubs as possible. The men who usually attend and support them are not men who need much governing. They attend, not because the rules and regulations say they must, but because they wish to improve in their business, and desire to see agriculture improve around them. All the constitution needed is to name the club, state its objects, what officers it shall have and how long they shall serve, when, where, and how often the club shall meet, conditions of membership, the business it shall attend to, how expenses shall be met, and what shall be the order of exercises. That is quite enough for any club.

Wherever a live Grange exists, it takes the place of the club, as far as its members are concerned, and farmers living convenient to such a Grange can not do better, perhaps, than to join it. But there are hundreds and thousands of neighborhoods where no Grange exists that ought to sustain a good farmers' club, in which all questions pertaining to farming and farm management, with all other questions affecting the interests of the farmer, can be discussed and investigated. We hope to hear of the organization of many before the winter has passed away.

To know and understand your husband, summer and winter him. To domesticate the 'animal,' feed high, pet and pat."

DAILY PAPERS & PERIODICALS

The Weekly Press

FOR 1880.

NEW ATTRACTIONS.

A Pennsylvania Serial Story.

PRICE REDUCED

TO

$1.25 FOR SINGLE COPY,

OR

$1 IN CLUBS

OF TEN OR MORE.

(Including prepaid postage.)

In order to place the Weekly Press within the reach of the Republican voters of the State, the price has been reduced to one dollar and twenty-five cents for the year, by the single copy, or to one dollar for the year, by clubs.

The Press is thoroughly devoted to the principles of the Republican party, and maintains the Republican organization because it believes that the prosperity and progress of the people cannot be safely intrusted to any other existing political organization. During the year 1880, the most stupendous political conflict of this epoch will take place. Upon its issue will depend the political destiny of the country for many years.

The Press steadily resists the aims of the "Solid South," which is now organized to capture the Executive, to retain Congress, to remodel and control the Supreme Court, and to subordinate every public interest to the overmastering purpose of controlling the policy of the Nation, and thereby gaining by legislation and peaceful means what it lost on the field. The Press enforces the duty of preserving in full force the Constitutional Amendments made to secure the fruits of the war; upholds the right of every lawful voter to a free and unbought exercise of his right; inflexibly insists upon an honest return of the votes cast; justifies the use of all necessary means to prevent fraudulent voting and fraudulent returning of votes; accepts as fundamental the equal righ of every citizen to the adequate protection by the law of his political as well as his civil rights; maintains as wise the Republican policy of Resumption and honest financial legislation; defends as sound the policy of protection to American industry; and, in general, follows whithersoever the Republican principles lead.

Special measures have been taken to strengthen the paper in all its departments.

The Editorial Department will be in the hands of able and experienced writers, and the range of subjects discussed will be as wide as in any other first-class newspaper in the Union.

The Literary, the Agricultural, the Family and the Children's departments will remain in charge of experienced and able editors; and the Market Reports will be full and accurate.

Close attention will be given to the State news of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

Our Foreign Correspondence will include letters from Europe and all portions of the world.

A special feature of the Weekly Press will be a Serial Story in illustration of Frontier Life in Central Pennsylvania, prior to and during the Revolutionary War, in which John Brady and his sons John and Samuel, and other border celebrities will be prominently introduced. This story will be written by Mr. Charles McKnight, author of "Our Western Border," "Old Fort Du Quesne," and "Simon Girty," and will be begun about the middle of November.

☞Special terms will be made with Canvassers.

☞Specimen copies sent free on application.

☞Parties sending $1.25 will be entitled to receive the paper from date till January 1, 1881.

PROF. HARRIS' RADICAL CURE FOR SPERMATORRHŒA.
"SEMINAL PASTILLE."

A Valuable Discovery and New Departure in Medical Science, an entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent Cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by its only Direct Application to the principal seat of the Disease, acting by Absorption, and carrying its specific influence on the Seminal Vesicles, Ejaculatory Ducts, Prostate Gland and Urethra. The use of the Remedy is attended with no pain or inconvenience, it is quickly absorbed and soon absorbed, producing an immediate soothing and restorative effect upon the sexual and nervous organizations wrecked from self-abuse and excesses, stopping the drain from the system, restoring the mind to health and sound memory, removing the Dimness of Sight, Nervous Debility, Confusion of Ideas, Aversion to Society, etc. etc., and the appearance of premature old age, thereby conquering this trouble, and restoring perfect Sexual Vigor, where it has been dormant for years. This mode of treatment has stood the test in very severe cases, and is now a pronounced success. Drugs are too much prescribed in these troubles, and, as many can bear witness to, with but little, if any permanent good. There is no nonsense about this preparation. Prof. Harris' Pastille is to positively guarantee that it will give satisfaction.—During the eight years that it has been in general use, we have thousands of testimonials as to its value, and it is now conceded by the Medical Profession to be the most rational means yet discovered, of reaching and curing this very prevalent trouble, that is well known to be the cause of untold misery to so many, upon whom quacks prey with their useless nostrums and big fees. The Remedy is put up in a neat box, enough to last a month, and sent in a plain wrapper by mail, sealed, for $5.—Two boxes (each box to effect a permanent cure unless in severe cases), $9—Three boxes (lasting three full months), (with positive guarantee and return paper, in the worst cases), $7.—Full DIRECTIONS for using will accompany EACH BOX.
(Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and freed from the duties of life, as one is if never affected. Sent sealed for stamp to any one. Sold ONLY by the

THE BEST REMEDY
FOR
Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

Diseases of the pulmonary organs are so prevalent and fatal, that a safe and reliable remedy for them is invaluable to every community. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results, which enables physicians as well as invalids to use it with confidence. It is the most reliable remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs that science has produced. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt and certain relief, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it without difficulty. In the treatment of ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household, for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

The marvellous cures which AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has effected all over the world are a sufficient guaranty that it will continue to produce the best results. An impartial trial will convince the most sceptical of its wonderful curative powers, as well as of its superiority over all other preparations for pulmonary complaints.

Eminent physicians in all parts of the country, knowing its composition, recommend AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL to invalids, and prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proved its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

Orange Blossoms.

A bright and happy company, about sixty-five in number, assembled on Thursday the 6th inst., to witness the wedding ceremony of Mr. James B. Lane and Miss Thomasine Thomas, as well as the home-coming reception of Mr. Richard Thomas and his bride, both of which events occurring at the same time conspired to make the Thomas mansion a center of great attraction to our towns-people and to all who knew the parties concerned.

Now let us speak a little of the bride and groom while we wait for them to appear. Mr. Lane is the second of the three sons of Mrs. Lane, of this place, and is the grand nephew of President James Buchanan, whose name he bears, besides counting many illustrious names in his ancestry. He is a young man of fine, manly bearing and character, holding a position of trust in Reynolds & Co.'s bank. But nothing more or better can we say of the gentleman than that he is the fortunate one to win for his own the fair and dainty form of Miss "Tam" Thomas, the daughter of Mr. J. V. Thomas, of Bellefonte, who has been, since she has graced Bellefonte society, most deservedly one of its reigning belles.

Every one must have brought with them a bridal offering, for presents more in number than the guests filled a room with their glittering array. To enter into details we have not room, and to describe a few would be to do injustice to the many left unmentioned. Seldom has a couple begun their life together with more numerous or more elegant expressions of kind feelings from their friends.

Floral decorations, the work of the bride and her lady friends, adorned the room with fine effect, while to add to the beauty of the scene, sparkling sperm lights stood in every niche, gleaming through the ivy leaves, and sparkling on the blossoms, creating a vista like to fairyland for its brilliancy. The crowning piece of decoration was a large horse-shoe of flowers, trimmed by the bride's own tasty fingers. At last the awaited hour of two arrived, and the bridal party took their stand beneath the mystic emblem of good fortune. Pale pink satin brocade was the material in which Miss Thomas was attired, orange blossoms and white vail completing her trousseau, while the bridesmaids, Misses Mary Thomas and Mary Gephart wore costumes all of purest white. Clifford Thomas and Elliot Lane gallantly filled the positions of attendant groomsmen. The impressive Episcopal service, Mr. Hewitt officiating, soon made the two man and wife, and launched them forth on the voyage together, which all desired might be beneath cloudless skies.

To many, no doubt, what followed was quite as interesting as any part of the day's programme; for all sat down to such a wedding feast as would have whetted the appetite of Epicurus. Judging from the gustatory abilities of some of those present, we have no apprehension that justice was not fully done to the festive board. Congratulations and pleasure occupied the time till the approaching hour of the evening train warned all to have their good-byes ready. When they were said, Mr. and Mrs. Lane departed for New York, where a reception, on quite as grand a scale as the wedding scene awaited them.

The company remained, enjoying themselves with music and the dance, until half-past eight, when they went to their homes feeling that the suspended emblem of good-luck had exerted a most potent influence, and that to all the day had been one of joy unmarred.

—A good citizen is the man who will travel three hundred miles to exercise his privilege and perform his duty in casting a freeman's vote. Did every man deem so sacred his franchise a good deal of the wrong in our land would be made right. Such an example did Mr. James Milliken set the duty-shirking stay-at-home, when he came all the way from the metropolis to cast his single ballot at the late election. We have an idea that the man who is so dutiful and diligent at the polls would represent the public well in legislative halls. When the census changes the complexion of our Congressional District, Republicans will not forget the man who crossed the sea in '78, and traveled far in '79 to vote as he thought best and right.

—The public school is being put in trim for the winter. A new flue is being put in, and in order not to disturb the schools, all the work is done at night, which interrupts the night schools for the week, however.

—Come, my friend, lay aside those old, unseasonable pants, and let S. & A. Loeb fit you out with a new pair, which will be a marvel of cheapness, considering their quality.

—A beautiful line of misses' cloth coats at Lyon & Co's.

Faces.

An ordinary lecture audience was drummed up to hear "Faces" by Allen A. Griffith, A. M., President of Fulton College, Ill., in Humes' Hall, last Friday night. Many, and we among them, went doubting the speaker's ability to entertain an audience with such an unusual subject, but all went from the building fully satisfied as to Mr. Griffith's elocutionary powers, and with the consciousness that the evening had been most wisely and pleasantly spent. The speaker has made a thorough study of physiognomy, and the relation of the facial muscles, the character, besides educating his own face to be a most striking illustrative medium. Prof. Griffith's usual countenance is not an ordinary one, and together with his piercing eye, it makes even at rest a strong impression on the observer, but when moved by his well trained facial muscles, it makes a recitation vivid indeed. The voice of the speaker is very deep and clear.

The thought to which we desire to give prominence especially in reviewing this lecture and recitation is that the principal aim of the speaker seems to be to elevate while amusement takes a secondary place. The main point of the speaker all through appeared to be to impress his hearers with the fact that the face is but the reflection of the soul, and to have a pure refined pleasing countenance, the mind must be of a similar character. He also read us a little chapter on enthusiasm that we might dwell on with profit. Conservatism is all very well in its place, but without a little brightening of enthusiastic feeling and action, it is the very essence of deadness and inertia. Prof. Griffith did well and drove, the nail home when he encouraged the people of Bellefonte to enthusiasm.

—Next Sabbath evening the tenth anniversary of the Bellefonte Y. M. C. A. will be held in the Presbyterian church. Most of the other churches will be closed, their pastors taking part in the exercises. Charles F. Cook, the re-elected president of the Association, will make the opening remarks, after which "Coronation" will be sung. Then will follow prayer by Rev. A. D. Yocum, an exercise of importance to the association and of interest to the Christian business men of our town, the treasurer's report, a presentation of the claims of the organization to the people of the town by Gen. Jas. A. Beaver, short talks, the doxology, and benediction, by Rev. Jas. P. Hughes. The exercises will be of unusual interest, and we think all will do well to attend.

—All who had the pleasure of listening to Prof. Griffith on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, owe their thanks to Mr. Edward Humes, for bringing Mr. Griffith here, making him his guest, and throwing open his hall to the public for two successive days. A large house listened with delight to the free lecture on Saturday night, some being of the opinion that it was superior to the effort of the speaker on the night before. He kept the house convulsed with laughter, mingling with the fun many elocutionary hints about public speaking and reading. All who heard him felt themselves much profited as well as on better terms with themselves and the world in general than they had been for some time.

—The grand election news somewhat disturbed the customary even tenor of our way last week, and as a consequence our paper was not just all we would have it be. Much local news that we trust would have been of interest to our readers was crowded out, and in the hurry some errors crept in, particularly two egregious ones in the water committee report, the types making us say "arises" instead of "varies," and "answer" instead of "arrive at." It is our hope, notwithstanding, that our rooster crowed loud enough to make amends for all discrepancies.

—Lyon & Co., are the largest dealers in dry goods, dress goods, clothing, boots and shoes, hats and caps, and millinery. They will guarantee their goods 15 to 20 per cent. cheaper than any house in the county.

—Great excitement! Unrivalled attractions! Crowds jamming the doorways! Stampeding for the first choice! Tremendious applause of country people over S. & A. Loeb' success in pleasing them.

—J. H. Bauland, Esq., our busy Bee Hive dry goods merchant, has lately returned from the cities, bringing with him a large winter stock of the choicest goods the wholesale houses can supply.

—What's the use of throwing away your money on cheap, worthless goods? S. & A. Loeb don't sell that kind.

—Lyon & Co. have received another new lot of overcoats, of all the latest styles.

Improvements.

Colonel Shortlidge gives us the information that the water-works building has been much improved lately, and the surroundings put in better condition. "The inside of the engine room and pump-house has been greatly improved, and the improvements on the fore-bay enable one to see the water in the fore-bay, a very pretty sight when the sun is shining.

"Another object of great interest, and one which does the most service to the tax-payers for the money invested, is the new plunger pumps, propelled by the water wheel, which supply seven-eighths of the water in winter and two-thirds during the summer." For the erection of this the people of our town are indebted to the water committee of last year; viz., Messrs. Reynolds, Shortlidge and Kline, and for its success they may thank Wm. P. Duncan, Wm. R. Jenkins and J. Howard Lingle, who compose the firm of Wm. P. Duncan & Co. The pumps put in by Duncan & Co., supply from 136 to 144 gallons per minute, thus doing even better than guaranteed.

"One other commendable feature on the operation of the works, is that the committee have reduced the time of running the steam pump to four periods in the week and discontinued the running by steam on Sunday."

—Once more has the Bush House changed hands, but we are glad to say, by no means for the worse. The new proprietor is J. H. Myers, Esq., lately of Ohio, but a native and for some time a resident of Centre county. Mr. Myers has never been in the hotel business before, but his business reputation is second to none, and he is favorably known to many in this vicinity, which will conspire to render his proprietorship successful. In addition, Mr. Myers has secured the services of that prince of hotelists, W. P. Bigony, who will superintend the establishment, and will keep its record up to all it has been during the management of Mr. George Hoppes, the retiring proprietor.

—It was clearly evident at the late fire, that the Undine hose was little better than worthless. Every section was rotten and full of holes. However gallant may be the efforts of the boys, and however willing they may be, if they have good-for nothing working materials, they can accomplish comparatively little. This would be a damper on anybody's enthusiasm. As our fire companies are volunteer organizations, and upon them depends our whole safety in case of fire, surely the council cannot do otherwise than show their appreciation of the Undine company by giving them such hose as is worth while taking to a fire.

—It is going the rounds of the papers that frost-bitten, plants if they be placed in the dark during the day following, if frozen at night, or immediately if in the daytime, they will revive and be all right again in the majority of cases.

—Mr. F. D. McCollum, a year or so since the proprietor of the Bush House, and more recently of Warren, this State, has accepted a position in the Treasurer's office, B., N. Y. & Phil'a railroad, and has moved to Buffalo.

—Madisonburg is to have a new church. The German Reformed congregation, Rev. Mr. Landis, pastor, have secured the necessary funds and have given the contract for a neat and commodious gothic structure.

—Rev. Mr. Seiler, lately of Kolapoor Presbyterian Mission, India, was the guest last week of Mrs. S. T. Shugert. He spoke in the Wednesday evening meeting, telling something of the work among the Hindoos.

—A very pretty street show-case now adorns the front of F. C. Richards' store. Among other beautiful things it contains that all-pendulum clock that has attracted some attention to the store of late.

—Mr. Joseph Schnell was the man who said that "By ——, if the Democrats got licked this time it was the last time he'd ever give them a lift- sure as Lafayette was the father of this country!"

—"Mister, please gie me a 'Publican fer ter read indiwiduly," was the astonishing request of a little darkey last Thursday morning, who seemed most too small to possess any individuality.

—Mrs. Hughes, the wife of Rev. J. R. Hughes, now stationed in Wisconsin, but formerly of Unionville, is making a short visit with her brother, Rev. J. P. Hughes. Her children accompany her.

—Lyon & Co., are selling a cassimere all-wool suit at $7.50, that can't be beat.

—A good hat 40cts., an undershirt 20cts. at Lyon & Co's.

A Restored Art.

Some may be of the opinion that cigar-making does not belong properly to one of the arts, and so far as the ordinary run of manufactured tobacco is concerned, doubtless they are right. Not so, however with all. Some cigars possess such fragrance, such olfactory-pleasing qualities, that even to the most particular, they betray the touch of a master hand, and skill in manufacture seldom rivalled. Such, permit us to say, is the case with C. A. Lindsey's brands, and every lover of the fragrant weed who has ever tested the product of the Palace Cigar Store will bear us out in this. He has restored cigar making to what it was in Cuba's palmy days. Doubting reader, go and see.

—Ex-Sheriff T. M. Hall, sheriff of this county during the years 1845-8, and once a candidate for State Senator, died at his home in Milesburg, Nov. 1st, at the advanced age of 73. He had been ailing physically and mentally, for some time, his fatal disease being paralysis. Mr. Hall leaves quite a number of children, some of whom are prominent and well-known. He was a kind, open-hearted, temperate gentlemen, and is sincerely mourned by all who knew him.

—A terrible collision occurred at Kittanning Point last Friday morning about 2 o'clock. Twenty cars were hurled over the steep embankment, causing the death of a brakeman and the destruction of much valuable freight. The accident was caused by the breaking of a coupling at the head of a steep grade of 96 feet to the mile, and the section left behind came thundering down the road at a speed of a mile a minute, plunging into the forward section and wrecking it.

—We call attention to the new advertisement of H. A. Williams & Bro. Their advertising shows their enterprise, and their work gives satisfactory evidence of their ability. A visit to the new Republican sanctum will show you some of their fine work. They are men of experience, and have reduced sign-writing, graining, and the various branches of their business to an exact science, as nearly as it can be done. The most particular have their work done by Messrs Williams & Bro.

—A little boy of Mr. John Derstine, one of a pair of twins, about five years of age, died on Monday week. Mr. Derstine has been very unfortunate with his little ones. His little girl, Katie, was almost taken from him by cruel accident a year or so ago, and now the death-angel has visited the home bringing sorrow in his wake. Brain fever was the destroyer that took from Mr. and Mrs. Derstine their little treasure.

—Many hearers assembled in Humes' Hall last Sunday afternoon to attend the opening meeting of the Week of Prayer for Young Men, the leader being the chief attraction. Very interesting were the talks of the afternoon, Prof. Griffith opening and leading the exercises. A notable feature was a number of our colored singers sitting up front and giving to the service of song their able support.

—All who listened last year with pleasure to the recitation of "Damon and Pythias," by Homer D. Cope, will be glad to learn that the same gentleman will again appear before us on New Year's night, with a new and miscellaneous programme. The Knights of Pythias will have the direction of the entertainment.

—The Watchman tells of the burning of a camp belonging to a party of hunters from Howard. It was doubtless the work of some villianous dog-in-the-manger sort of a person. Everything was destroyed, yet we cannot see how the loss could foot up $75,000, —more likely $750.

—Owing to the exertions of Gen. Beaver, the State College boys were entertained last Saturday by President Allen Griffith, who made a flying visit to the institution with the General. Mr. Griffith also preached for Rev. Mr. Laurie on Sunday evening.

—Right upon the heels of the immense shower of Republican ballots came a fall of heaven's white winged messengers covering the ground three inches deep. Even the clouds seem determined to snow in the Democracy.

—Over in Clearfield county they seem to be badly mixed up. Even the strawberries have gotten off the track. Mrs. Brisbin, of Osceola, has one ambitious plant that put forth a complete strawberry in October.

—The Port Matilda bridge is finished. It is a fine structure, much like the new bridge at Milesburg. Mr. Jonas Sperring, of Howard, was the contractor.

—All the finest fruit in their season at Sechler's.

—Mr. Richard Thomas and his bride ended their honey-moon travels on the 5th, arriving in town on the evening of that day, and taking up his abode in an elegantly furnished suite of rooms at the Bush House. A number of friends were ready to greet them, and the band treated them to a serenade.

—Two colored men, one armed with a pistol, and the other with a black-jack, created a melee in Williamsport last Wednesday evening, by joining battle with these weapons. Both were slightly wounded. A dispute about backing-up room at the depot for their 'bus and dray was the cause of the fuss.

—Centre county will, with eight other counties, form the ninth census district. The supervisor has not yet been appointed. It wouldn't be a bad idea to have lady enumerators. Their gentle sisters would not fool them on the age question, you may bet your sweet life.

—An aged inmate of the Mifflin County almshouse, Mrs. Kinney, aged 86 years, was burned to death on Saturday a week, her clothing taking fire from a stove to which she was standing too near. The almshouse of that county is said to be the worst in the State.

—We are agents for Sawyer's Woolen Mills; and also for Kipper's foreign woolens. The finest fabrics. All wool suits to order, Twelve and one-half Dollars.

—A party of hunters started last Thursday morning for Eddy Lick Run, where they will make a prolonged hunt. As we are somewhat inwardly interested in the result, we desire unbounded success for the party.

—Sechler still indulges in signery. H. A. Williams just put up the fourth one for the establishment yesterday.

—Mr. Thomas Perdue is suffering severely, we are sorry to say, from white swelling in his left arm.

—A new and broad board-walk now improves the front of Geo. A. Bayard's residence.

—A good overcoat $2.50, at Lyon & Co's.

—Chew Jackson's best sweet navy tobacco. vol 11-5-1y

MARRIED.

MARKEL—ROSSMAN—At the Lutheran parsonage, in Bellefonte, Pa., by Rev. S. E. Furst, on Sept. 18, 1879, Mr. John I. Markel, of Bellefonte, and Miss Jennie Rossman, of Centre Hall.

The Markets.

Nov. 11th, 1879.

At Philadelphia there was rather more inquiry for wheat, and prices were 2c ₱ bushel higher. 9,000 bushels sold in lots, including Pennsylvania red at $1 56@1 57; southern red at $1 56@1 57; Pennsylvania and southern amber at $1 58@1 40; southern and western white at $1 40@1 41 ₱ bushel, as to quality. Rye—There was very little movement. Small sales at 86@86c ₱ bushel. Corn was firmer; 12,000 bushels sold in lots at 57c for rejected and steamer, and 58@59c ₱ bushel for sail mixed and yellow. Oats were steady. About 8,100 bushels sold in lots at 44@45c for white, and 41@42 for mixed.

At Bellefonte the price of wheat has been well maintained, notwithstanding the short reaction eastward. Our quotations are now above shipping prices. We notice some demand for potatoes, to ship. Beef is scarce yet, and in good demand for a prime article.

SEEDS.

At Philadelphia the offerings of Cloverseed have fallen off, but there is not much demand, except for strictly prime lots. Several sales of low and medium at 9@9¼c, and choice at 9½c. The market is bare of Flaxseed, and it is wanted. Sales are reported at $1 42@1 45.

At New York Clover is firm; sales of 150 bags at 9¼@9¾c for western choice to extra choice. Timothy dull and unchanged at $2 85@2 90. Flaxseed quiet; small sales at $1 70.

At Detroit. Cloverseed was firm; prime at $5 30@5 35; choice at $5 65.
